Improved access to health and mental health care can be achieved by provision of specialist services with professionals trained to directly communicate with deaf people and with sign-language interpreters. I argue that atheism just like theism is an appropriate domain of study for social and cultural psychiatrists and allied social scientists interested in exploring socio-environmental stressors and buffers relating to mental health.

In other words, people who are confused and maladjusted are likely to remain so until they learn to state their problems clearly enough to indicate what sort of steps might be taken in order to change their situation or their behavior to advantage. The verbal confusions of maladjusted people are not independent of the confusions in other aspects of their behavior. No one has ever seen an electron.
