Most of the Tujia areas returned to central control during the period 1728—1735. The most famous songs are Weeding Song, accompanied by a set of gongs and drums that inspires people to move forward, Lying Song that makes people laugh and amused, and Hand-waving Song, which is known as the most influential large-scale song and dance of the Tujia people. In this closed land, though people here are far apart from each other in different mountains, the folk songs shorten their distance.
