Does good governance always boost development?

The discrepancy between the objective nature of public administration and the subjectivity of ways of its implementation is the second derivative of the fundamental contradictions of public administration. It is currently possible to identify the main derivatives of these fundamental contradictions.

that power influence has an order encouraging essence, while an administrative influence implies a clear horizontal communication built on the principle of feedback.

World Development Report 2017: Governance and the Law

Decisions at the local level often do not reflect the real needs of the population's majority as they are adopted in the interests of a small social group, which controls almost all national resources.

Buying this book means my Jack Russells get their supper! Bureaucracy: Obstructing or Facilitating Development? Therefore, the most important thing is the balance between the administrative and powerful factors in the public administration, which sometimes come into conflict with each other. One of these contradictions is between the need for public administration in a fair observance of its interests and the balance between these needs and interests
