Köprülü era

The rebel forces ultimately established winter quarters in the southeast Anatolian city of modern Gaziantep , while Murtaza and what was left of his army spent the winter in Aleppo, which had been seized from the rebels earlier in the year. Some attest that Murtaza ordered the massacre out of distrust, while others are of the opinion that Abaza Hasan was himself actively preparing to seize Aleppo from within, and Murtaza took action to preempt this.

Köprülüler Devri

Nevertheless, many positive traits were still attributed to him, particularly with regard to his military skill.
