The Evolution of Public Art Policy in Toronto — The Artful City

In addition, the Municipality has jurisdiction over major arterial roads, water systems, parklands and other properties that are subjects for potential public art considerations. Regions have been placed in specific zones based on a number of indicators and thresholds, including case rates, per cent positivity, health system capacity and more. Patrons are required to be seated, with a minimum of two metres between tables.

A Public Art Policy Framework for Metropolitan Toronto

Once a building is built, the ownership is transferred from the developer to the condominium board to oversee ongoing maintenance. The South is estimated to suffer the most losses in employment for both the creative industries and creative occupations, followed by the West and the Northeast, respectively.

The Evolution of Public Art Policy in Toronto — The Artful City

We estimate losses in sales of goods and services, employment, and earnings for creative industries and creative occupations at the national, state, and metropolitan levels over the period of April 1 through July 31, 2020.

Measuring the economy, region by region

TAC does not accept applications by any other means of delivery. Our April 2020 launch of Zoo Food for Life generated enough funds to provide for food through to the end of December 2020.

Lost art: Measuring COVID

Ziad Ghanem, director of Statistics Canada's Industry Accounts Division, notes that while national and provincial GDP data are exceptionally useful for providing an overall picture of the country's and provinces' economic health, these data do not provide the kind of information that allows users to assess the economic performance of Canada's cities and study its impact on city population and growth.
